NEWS LETTER FROM STATE DEPARTMENTS

COLUMBUS.—Under the direction of Edith O. Wiseman of the reservation department of the bureau of motor vehicles applications for reserved or special request 1937 licenses are being mailed to approximately 60,000 Ohioans, it was announced by Motor Vehicle Registrar Frank West. Although the new plates, with maroon numbers on a white background, are not required until April 1 they may be used on and after March 10, Registrar West said. Offices of deputy registrars throughout the state will be opened the first of March for the sale of the 1937 motor vehicle tags to those who do not have special numbers. The reserved list last year reached an all-time high of 43,000 sets, but the total in 1937 will be about 17,000 additional, Miss Wiseman predicted. There will be absolutely no extension of time, after April for use of the 1936 plates, Registrar West asserted.

For the third consecutive year the January foreign and domestic corporation fees and miscellaneous receipts in the corporation division of the Department of State have shown an increase which is indicative of improved business and industry, according to Secretary of State William J. Kennedy. The total in January 1935 was $24,727.72, in January 1936 the receipts jumped to $33,867.28, and in January 1937 to $33,897.95, Secretary Kennedy reported. He pointed out that the business of the corporation division serves as a barometer of general business and industry in the state.

The appointment of Thomas J. Ryan, well known Columbus druggist, to the newly-created post of assistant state fire marshal was announced by Commerce Director Alfred A. Benesch under whose department the division of state fire marshal operates. Mr. Ryan has been secretary of the Ohio racing commission for the past two years. In his new position he will coordinate as contact man for the fire marshal's office and travel about the state in co-operation with fire insurance company interests. As secretary of the racing commission, Mr. Ryan inaugurated many measures which protected not only the revenue of the state at the various Ohio horse race tracks but the interests of the wagering public as well.

Of importance to Ohio farmers was the announcement that a new bulletin entitled "Erosion Control in Ohio Farming" has been issued at Ohio State university and that copies will be sent to county agricultural extension offices where they may be obtained free of charge. The publication was prepared by D. R. Dodd, extension agronomist, and discusses in detail the losses caused by soil erosion and methods by which erosion may be scientifically controlled in Ohio. The bulletin is illustrated.

Of importance to boards of education in the flood-devastated areas of the state was the announcement by Assistant Director E. N. Dietrich of the Department of Education that the schools forced to close by the raging water will not lose funds provided through the operation of the state school foundation program. "The flood will be regarded as an act of God" and distribution of funds will be made the same as though the schools had functioned on a normal basis," Mr. Dietrich said.

What You See and Hear

Some Observations On A Mid-Winter Vacation Trip To The Southland

KENTUCKY.—Has little charm to offer in the month of February other than the many beautiful homes on the wide plains of the Blue-grass State. What a contrast to early summer with all nature dressed in the velvet green. In rolling along you are only a few hours ride from the Ohio river that once more peaceful, if it did leave a trail of filth and disaster in the recent flood.

In due time you reach Lexington, the famous horse town thirty years ago but the college town and Corbin. By this time you are in the young mountains and riding for miles over land and in the stone walled river valleys, times that must be very attractive trip to the "Smoky Mountains" which along about May. As you ride along the north side of the mountains there was ice in beautiful formation as the water seeped from the rock crevices, and frozen during the night previous. Once on the other side the sunshine upon the ice gave it a picturesque view. By noon the heat had taken away all that had been formed during the night. Riding the side of the mountains and then the brink of mountain streams with an occasional passenger or freight in sight is a novel experience.

TENNESSEE.—Jellico on the state line is at the base of the Cumberland mountains, a typical mountain town, however we are not so sure that one of our radio announcers could connect his product of "Raspberry, strawberry and lime" with this Tennessee town. Over, around and at times under the hills we are soon in the hills where a small riot of striking employees took place the day before. By the time we had reached Clinton, there was a sign of spring, the first jonquils were sighted.

A side trip was to the famous Norris Dam, a government project on the TVA that is to develop electric power with stored water covering miles of valley. Just where this power is to be sold is the question. One fellow told us hundreds of families near, never even owned a coal oil lamp, still being in the candle age. We were somewhat inquisitive and asked where we could meet the groom and his nine-year-old child wife, and the old fellow answered, "which one?"

GEORGIA.—Sixty miles from Dalton and you are at Dalton, Ga. You hardly hit this inland port until you think all the bed clothes were soiled at once. Each town has its own traditions but it is left to Dalton to make all the bed spreads. In almost every front yard, at filling stations, and rural homes for miles you find the grandest array of bed quilts. There is every pattern that can be imagined and for colors, not even a sunset could find more. What a wonderful road from Knoxville south and known as the Lee Highway. What would have been the result if Lee had had such a road for his army back in the 60's. Were Sherman to retrace his steps from "Atlanta to the Sea" what more could he have done over such roads as we find down here. Not a half dozen grade crossings over roads the entire route thus far. Being in Georgia we must tell you more about this wonderful weather. Lawns are perfect in their velvet carpet of green. The evergreen hedge that looks like it was hand-made all the way given a back-ground of the yellow bell

Farm Bureau Leader

Cautions Solons On

Taxation Problems

"No former Assembly has faced the enactment of such far-reaching and important tax legislation as does the present one," said Perry L. Green, president of the Ohio Farm Bureau, Columbus, in a letter addressed to all members of the state legislature.

Certain social functions of state government, according to Mr. Green, such as education, welfare, highways, and conservation, can no longer be approached from a local point of view, because these social needs "vary inversely with the distribution of incomes or the production of wealth and natural resources, the returns from which both state and local levies must be paid."

The Farm Bureau leader explained that the farmers of Ohio wish to emphasize "the tremendous importance and significance of the forthcoming enactments" and are doing so "in no spirit of selfishness, because our research convinces us that the position of the farmer is in common with that of the great mass of other citizens and home owners everywhere."

"The danger of persisting in enactments of tax measures which force burden on the counties a greatly added burden in support of education and welfare can only result in two grave mistakes," warned Mr. Green. "First, there will be forced back on real estate an unbearable tax burden. Second, and of equal importance, such a program will not meet the needs of adequately providing for either education or welfare."

"There are now and will continue to be pressing community needs which must be met that will absorb all possible justifiable increases in real estate taxes," Mr. Green's letter continued. "The Farm Bureau believes that the cost of these general social advantages should be borne largely by a broad base collection of taxes, and that collection can best be accomplished in the interest of creating economic independence of the individual members of society, through the enactment of selective sales taxes and a net income tax."

"Through compromising with the real issues at stake now, refunding obligations, sanctioning more indebtedness, endangering local government stability, and ignoring our responsibility to help stabilize economically the great mass of our citizens; we can worry on for a time, but we shall find ourselves then still more hopelessly involved than ever."

REASON INSTEAD OF PREJUDICE

The recent statement by Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, Chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, on the power issue, is the finest state paper on the subject yet produced.

While Dr. Morgan favors government and municipal ownership, if it can meet high standards of efficiency and service, and points out what he considers weaknesses in private utilities, he emphasizes what so many advocates of government electric developments conveniently forget—that it is not honest business, or good governmental morals, for government to undermine the electric industry irrespective of the interests of the utility investor, the taxpayer, the worker for private enterprise, and consumers.

He says, "It is not wise to so center attention upon utility abuses as to fail to see the great achievements of the electric power industry in America. There has been an intelligent aggressiveness in technical development and activity in the integration of the industry which has brought about a high level of convenience and service. . . I hold that wherever a high quality of industrial statesmanship exists in the industry it should be recognized and cooperated with, and thereby strengthened. . . It is no secret that graft, incompetence, bureaucracy, red tape, and patronage have been realities in American government. Unless these can be brought well under control they may devour more than does all the waste of exploitation and abuse in the private industry. . . The assumption that only political agitation and action are necessary to bring about sound public ownership of power is naive, and will lead ultimately to higher costs and more restricted service."

Elsewhere in his paper Dr. Morgan warns against duplication of facilities by government, and says that if a community undertakes public ownership existing private properties should be taken over at a fair price. He adds: "In reporting on public ownership in 'yardstick' undertakings, public statements should be fair and representative. There should be no hidden subsidies, either of money or services."

Dr. Morgan advocates a rule of reason instead of prejudice in debating and harmonizing electric power questions.

BENEFITS OF PRODUCER-CONSUMER CAMPAIGNS

The question has been raised as to whether the producer-consumer campaigns conducted by chain stores to move large quantities of agricultural products in a short time, are of real benefit to agriculture. The doubters wonder whether the farmer gets a profitable price for the produce.

It should be clearly understood in this connection that in very few cases do chains or any other merchandisers buy direct from farmers. Most foods must be processed, and the distributor purchases from the processor or handler. The price paid the farmer originally is not and cannot be fixed by the chains.

It is obvious, however, that the question of price is far from being all there is to the matter. It is the cumulative effect of the producer-consumer campaign that is a very important element of benefit to agriculture. Creation of demand has three immediate results: First, the market price is probably prevented from going lower, and perhaps from completely collapsing. Second, experience shows that a more active market naturally tends to improve wholesale prices. Third, clearing away an accumulated surplus crop improves the opportunity for an oncoming crop to be sold at a better price.

It is impossible to measure with statistical exactness the full benefits of the producer-consumer campaigns. The best evidence of their benefits is found in the attitude of producers and producer organizations that continually request producer-consumer campaigns on behalf of their groups and which, as to past campaigns, have spoken glowingly of the resultant benefits. The producers know, from actual experience, that stimulation of demand—even though prices may not be as high as desired—is of inestimable service to the future outlook for agriculture.

PROMOTING TRUTH IN BUSINESS

For many years the New York Stock Exchange has been tightening its rules and regulations and strengthening devices to protect the investor. It has led a determined and successful fight for wider corporate publicity; its listing applications are made available and constitute a principal source of detailed information respecting companies whose securities are held by the public.

The effect of these high standards for listing unquestionably has been to repel a great deal of business from the exchange. The constitution of the exchange contains a great number of regulations to promote high standards of commercial honor—regulations adopted in the interest of the general public.

The exchange has been widely misrepresented by the ignorant and the malicious. Any one troubling to actually investigate its attitude toward the ethics and practices of concerns permitted to list their securities "on its board" will discover the unremitting effort to protect the investor against shady or doubtful dealings of any and all kinds. These are matters of fact for those seeking the truth.

Sins of the parents are visited upon their children unto the third and fourth generation. And so are their U. S. bond issues.—Exchange.

As we can scan city papers from different sections of the country we find few that even credit Roosevelt with good intentions in his plan to get control of the Supreme Court. The Springfield Sun recently carried a number of interviews from prominent citizens and we were most interested in that of Mrs. John S. Heaume, State Regent of the D. A. R., although her views were personal. In part she said: "I cannot see how this country will benefit by the President's suggestion to reorganize the Supreme Court. It is not the court that is slow in making decisions, or which 'logs up legal matters, it is our own courts. . . Besides, one must remember that one man cannot always be right, and I think it would be unwise therefore to place so much power in one man—the President. To invest the President with this added power would take away the last recourse that the masses of the American people possess in having matters adjusted for them. . . I think too much stress is being laid on this matter of age, anyway, and surely a person of mature years and experience is more capable of judging wisely and cautiously than one with little or no experience, even though he be younger. The Supreme Court has always shown a most intelligent interpretation of the Constitution of the United States. The reason this constitution provided for the Supreme Court was for the protection of the masses, to keep one man from having too much power. I think it is criminal for our own courts to have cases just and be re-acted as they are. More attention should be paid to speeding up these courts, as our Supreme Court has always done very well. We should not interfere with that body—let it alone as provided in the Constitution."

Ross M. Greenawald, Springfield, president of the Clark County Farm Bureau—It is too radical a departure from our American ideas of Constitutional government to justify the support of the conservative citizen. No one knows where such a road leads. It seems that there is no question but that the President's request is actuated by the desire to get favorable action from the Supreme Court on New Deal legislation. Whether the legislation is good or bad is not the issue. The issue right now is this: Shall this country for a matter of mere expediency nullify the function of the Supreme Court? Is not such a procedure dangerous, and may it not react to the detriment of the nation in years to come?

B. L. Suver, Pike township, president of the Clark County Local Milk Producers Association—Although a Democrat, I must go on record as opposed to the move of President Roosevelt in seeking power to appoint six new judges to the Supreme Court. Our Supreme Court is too firmly established as an institution in our political system to allow it to come under the control of either our Congress or our president. Such a move as the President proposes would establish a dangerous precedent and our Supreme Court would become a political football subservient to liberal or reactionary presidents alike.

Those on relief in Ohio are not making the most of their opportunity in this state, if we take at face value what has happened in Nevada. A Democratic newspaper publisher informs us during a chat when he expressed himself as much concerned over the turn of events with his administration; his opposition to "monkey-business" with the Supreme Court and the policy of "taking from those who have for the have nots." This more or less disgusted publisher made the open declaration that sixty-five per cent of the members of the legislature in his state were on relief at the time of their election. This might be a blessing in disguise with the relief load reduced that much. It must not be overlooked that when HOLC first got into action so many congressmen and senators applied for government financial aid to get low interest rates on their debts, that thousands of property owners had to wait until new legislation could be enacted.

A farmer calls our attention to the New Deal proposal to provide crop insurance. This insurance fund of course be built up at the expense of all wheat sold. Our farmer friend says we do not have wheat crop failures more than one in five years. In other words farmers in the North Central States are much surer of crop than western farmers that are in the dust bowl or the Northwest where crops have failed four out of any five years. It is his view as he expresses it that farmers in this country would have deductions from the price of wheat to pay for crop losses in other sections of the country. He suggests a crop insurance based on location. For instance the North Central states or winter wheat growers in one group and spring wheat producers in another. A question has been put to us that we pass on:

"What should be done with the farmer even in this section that does not properly prepare his seed bed for wheat, so that a failure could almost be certain?" "Would not some farmers receive more from insurance than they average over a ten year period through their present day method of farming?"

Two men in a neighboring county were discussing the proposed legislation to delay reappraisal of real estate at least until 1942. Under the old law 1937 was the year for such appraisal which has been ordered by the State Tax Commission and from a state-wide protest has arisen. That is state-wide other than from the cities and certain politicians. The county auditors recently opposed the reappraisal as have county commissioners through state organizations.

The statement was made by an attorney that in a certain county he had made a survey and was startled to find that most of the farms sold last year in that county had been to men who were able to finance them without loans. Only about nine per cent were covered with mortgages and these farms were being operated by the owners. As for the 91 per cent most of them were rented, the owners probably holding them for investment or for the security offered in face of an uncertain government bond market. Neither of these figures represented a large number of farms that had been refinanced by mortgage to various government and private institutions.

It was agreed between both gentlemen that this was not the year for reappraisal because the market was abnormal. It was argued that the true valuation of a farm for taxation should be from an income basis. As one of the parties in the discussion was in the building material business he had the view that more property would be improved if there was no reappraisal the next few years. Owners that keep their farms well improved are penalized by high tax valuations, was his view. If delinquent taxes were collected there would be no need of additional funds. As we see it the State Tax Commission should be abolished and the county made the unit for all real estate taxes and all tax rates to be fixed by local authorities, subject to approval by the electors.

Back in twenty-nine when the depression, as we call it arrived, we were told there was an over supply of credit and a burden of debt almost everywhere. Then came the cry that we must provide relief for those who had speculated by investing in real estate and bonds at exorbitant values. Credit was checked and so was business for the latter was really sick. Now we have what is known as controlled prosperity. You are told to purchase any and everything at whatever the cost, cash or credit. Some days ago we inquired of a county recorder as to business in his office. The reply was "Not much doing, only filing mortgages." Debt in 1929 brought on the depression but in 1937 it is prosperity. You will probably have to read this with colored glasses to see through it.

Final proof that farmers have not reached the highest financial standards is contained in the report by Miss Barbara Van Heulen, Washington, D. C., farm credit administration, who says one land bank found divorces caused 25 per cent of its mortgage foreclosures. Farm income does not stretch far enough to cover taxes, interest, and alimony.

or fortythies, spiraea in full bloom, crocus and jonquills, tulips just ready to bloom forth. In the country much plowing has been completed for cotton and corn and here and there gardens are made.

As we travel from Atlanta to Macon we cross the great peach orchard country and not thousands but several million peach trees are now in full bloom. The peach industry has a strong rival in the pecan and the largest orchard in the world, 1200 acres was on the route where all the various kinds are grown. We learn that certain kinds of trees cost growers up to $7.50 each and then they must wait three or four years for a crop. On this day's trip we left our course to visit "Stone Mountain," located 16 miles east of Atlanta. It is the largest solid block of granite known in the world and is what might be termed the eighth wonder of the world. So much can be said of it, we leave that to another time. You can ride most of the day going from north to south across Georgia. With a sultry rain falling, ferns high as your head and palms almost two-story, lawns perfect and roses in bloom. We lay down the pen at Valdosta, Ga., near the Florida line only to pick up the menu which says: oysters, fish, home-grown mustard greens, strawberries and whipped cream. If we ever get into this town again our first item will be "mustard greens" with the above line.—The Editor.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

Some persons may think that "News Is News" but you will wear out a sheet of paper hunting for news from the north except when the mercury hits zero. That keeps the boys and girls in Florida. We are told that the recent flood on the Ohio developed many a southern hotel.

The sensation came Friday when the Atlanta Constitution and other southern daily papers took issue against the "monkey business" with the Supreme Court. Savannah Bar Association voted 49 to 15 against the Roosevelt plan and you can bet a dollar that not a member of the Bar in that city even has a Republican cousin. Sen. Norris is quoted in the press as opposing while Babson says some of these days a gang of industrialists will go to the White House—sit down in the Presidents office, and have their meals brought in until they get what they want. If they do they will have to sit on John Lewis' lap or nurse Sis Perkins.

We met a very refined lady of the "Sixties" in a hotel lobby one evening. She had learned of the Ohio delegation for she once visited in Dayton. She was delighted to meet any one from Ohio. Having had experienced some years ago, there was one thing we learned, you always stand a better chance among strangers by agreeing with their views. All of a sudden the good lady, with a religious paper in her hand, said: "What you all up in Ohio think of our President?" There was but one answer, "He's a wonderful executive," having eight fingers and two thumbs crossed. Now it was our turn with the ice broken. "Without doubt his two greatest achievements have been returning liquor and his plan to chloroform the nine old men on the Supreme Court." This was the curtain raiser for behind the lady sat her rheumatic husband with crutch in one hand and cane in the other. "Pa" broke in with the statement that if the Republicans ever elect a president they will kick out Roosevelt's court and put in one of their own. "Pa" continued to talk, after "Ma" says, "I think he (Roosevelt) is a great man other than spiritually." "But, Ma, did not Franklin go to church before the inauguration, then hold up his hand to God and swear to support the constitution; and before he was done with his speech he had torn the constitution to hell and back? Two whacks with the cane and Ma says, "It's time to retire."

While on the side trip to "Stone Mountain" there was a gang of seventy-five men, all dressed alike, regulation uniform and each with a shovel. The suits all had broad black stripes that run around. At the rear stood two guards with Winchester rifles half drawn. The prisoners were young men, not a one looked more than 30 or 35 years of age. They were engaged in road building. On the return a similar gang was found on another road. Georgia takes the federal funds and uses prison labor to build roads. Roosevelt has a different law or rule for states north and south. Prisoners are too good to work in Ohio and they live as guests of the tax payers. Down south no labor union tells a state just what to do.

Do not use in Ohio clover or alfalfa seed from any foreign country except Canada. Use Canadian seed if stocks from northern states cannot be obtained.

Temperance Notes

Sponsored by
Cedarville W. C. T. U.

Some one has said: "Keep a man's stomach full of booze and his head will be empty of ideas."

Your writer is much interested in an article entitled "Get It Off Your Chest" by The Oracle in "Boy's Life" for January 10. I quote directly, indirectly, and comment upon parts of it.

The frank fanatic says, "Oracle, can we not do something about this drinking evil? It is creeping through our very church doors. I know of P. T. A. leaders who drink. I know many church officials who do, in fact many pastors do not even attempt to stop it. Think of what drinking can do to boys! It has wrecked millions of youths. Don't soft-pedal, but say something."

Just another farm boy says, "Oracle, what about drinking in moderation? Doesn't the word temperance mean not doing anything to excess? As a 4H boy and as a Sunday school teacher of younger boys I have not been a drinker. But I wonder if I am too narrow."

During the recent floods along the Ohio and Mississippi rivers the sale of all intoxicating liquors was prohibited by the relief officials. The same action was taken last year in the floods in Pennsylvania.

The Ohio liquor council met in Columbus, February 3 and started a campaign for moderate drinking to prevent the return of prohibition.

Col. Hayden Eames, Cleveland, presided at the opening of the meeting. A 10-point program calling for temperance in the use of alcoholic beverages, sane and adequate enforcement of the state liquor laws, strict and honest regulation of the manufacture, sale and handling of liquor, prevention of the return of bootleg conditions of the prohibition era and legislation prohibiting retail of liquor near schools and churches was presented by Col. Hughes.

Word was received by Mrs. A. E. Swaby on Sunday that her sister, Miss Olive Coe is seriously ill in Florida. Mr. and Mrs. Swaby left immediately by motor. Miss Coe has been traveling in the south in company with Miss Cornelia Bradfute of near Clifton and Mrs. Herman Coe of Yellow Springs.

THE TOPIC FOR TODAY IS

SPRING CHICKS

Some poultry raisers have been "singing the blues" about coming out even on chickens whether raised for meat or eggs. If too many figure that way it may not be so bad after all. But in any event the most efficient flocks will come out best.

To have such a flock select chicks carefully to get a good start and then pick a good feeding program. Entering into a good feeding program is not just buying "a sack of feed." Find the best feed for the result you are after. In the Wayne line are good feeds for starting chicks off, growing for broilers, growing for laying pullets and egg mash for producing eggs.

For our feed demonstration we are setting up a modern Hawkins "Million Dollar Hen" brooder and will sell one, two and three-weeks-old chicks for those who do not care to take the higher risk of day old chicks. Any breed can be had from good stock at regular hatching prices. To encourage ordering early, we offer 25 pounds of chick starter with each order of 100 or more chicks placed three weeks in advance of delivery.

Life Is Too Short
To Master Cooking

Women who are looking for a career which becomes brighter as the years of experience increase should take up cooking, according to Alma L. Garvin, nutrition specialist, Ohio State University, who quotes Louis Eustache Ude, a Frenchman, as authority for her statement.

Monsieur Ude, a famous chef said: "Music, dancing, fencing, painting, and mechanics in general possess professors under 20 years of age, whereas, in the first line of cooking, pre-eminence never occurs under 50. We see daily young men and women who display the greatest artistic abilities but in our line nothing but the most consummate experience can elevate a person to the rank of chef professor. Cooking is an art which requires in addition to the most diligent and studious application, no small share of intellect and the strictest sobriety and punctuality."

With chefs who take such pride in their profession it is easy to understand why the French are noted for their ability as cooks, but cookery dates back many centuries before there was a nation called France. The Romans and the Athenians have left records of feasts that were amazing for the peculiarity or the number of the foods served.

Peacock and nightingale tongues were favorite dishes of the Emperor Hellogabulus. He rated goose liver as food for his dogs and fed his horses raisins but the animals in his zoo were given partridges and pheasants. He acquired quite a reputation on one occasion by serving the brains of 600 ostriches as one dish at a feast.

Miss Garvin says that history also gives Emperor Vitellius a high rating as a patron of the art of cookery. He got up a little snack for his brother on one occasion that had 2,000 dishes of fish and 7,000 of fowl, each one different. The Spartans frowned on this sort of high living and required that all persons eat the plain fare at public eating places. The black broth which was given credit for making the Spartans enthusiastic warriors was made from pork broth, vinegar, and salt.

The University nutrition specialist also states that women who choose cooking as a career will find an interesting field for research in the customs of eating and of selecting foods employed by people of different nations. Some of these customs seem peculiar to Americans, but then, an American once won an eating contest because his Cuban opponent could not convince himself that pumpkin pie was edible.
